GROWING DAHLIAS FOR CUT FLOWERS

Any good farm or garden soil will produce a satisfactory Dahlia crop. Select an exposed, sunny location free from tree roots. Dahlias make a lot of growth throughout the season and therefore require a lot of feed. We suggest one ton of good potato fertilizer to the acre, broadcast and disced in before planting, followed by one or two applications through the season of 500 lbs. per acre. Dahlias also want moisture but they must be planted on soil that is well drained. Any rain that submerges any part of the plant or root for more than a few hours can prove fatal. To maintain the plants in a good growing condition they should be irrigated on dry soils when the rainfall is less than 1" per week.

The planting season depends on climactic conditions. The roots will start to grow as soon as the soil is warm in the spring but subsequent plantings can be made as late as June. Do not, however, plant on very hot days for a soil temperature above 70° may cook the tubers.

Planting is simplified by opening straight furrows six inches deep and three feet apart. Place the tubers horizontally in the direction of the furrow, eyes-up, all facing the same way. Space large flower varieties 2 feet apart and the miniature and pompon kinds about 18". Cover with about two inches of soil and depend on subsequent cultivation when the plants are up to fill the depression or even ridge them after they are a foot tall.

With the plants in straight rows hand cultivation is reduced to a minimum. After the plants are a foot tall cultivate not more than two inches deep every week or as often as necessary to eliminate weeds and maintain a dust mulch.

Staking and tying the plants is desirable with small plantings. It is, however, quite costly and therefore not generally practiced by commercial growers who prefer straightening the plants after rain and wind storms.

Large-flowered Dahlias require systematic pruning to produce good flowers on long stems. When the plants have formed their second pair of full-sized leaves, cut out the center shoot just above the crotch of the upper pair. (See illustration.) Soon after the first pruning four laterals will be growing from the axil of the four leaves.

Before the next pruning step is taken the grower must decide on the number of flowers wanted per plant. The greater their number, the smaller the size. For four flowers of the largest size remove all further side shoots as they appear. If eight flowers are the goal per plant the four laterals are cut back just above their first pair of leaves. This will cause the growth of two secondary laterals from each. The number of flowers could be doubled by treating the secondary laterals in the same way as the primary ones.

All Dahlias form more than one flowerbud at the end of each branch. With large flowering varieties only one should be permitted to remain. The center one usually is chosen because it is the first to open and also the strongest. Pinch out all others. With miniature and pompon varieties these side buds can remain and make additional flowers.

INSECTS AND DISEASES

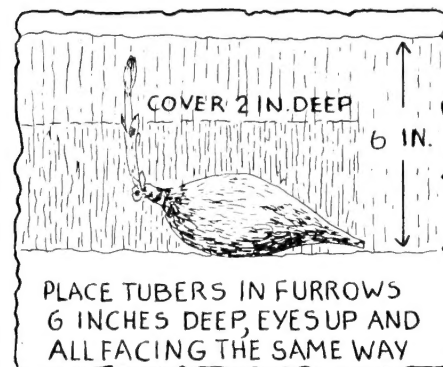

In most sections the Dahlia leafhopper is the worst pest with thrips a close second. Both are sucking pests easily controlled by keeping the plants covered with DDT. One pound wettable 50% DDT powder to 100 gallons of water together with a good sticker-spreader will give nearly perfect control if applied as a fine, forceful spray which will settle on all parts of the plants. This material also takes care of the corn borer and tarnishing plant bug.

While most growers can identify thrips readily, the Dahlia leafhopper, which is also called Potato and Apple leafhopper when found on these plants, is less familiar to many despite its rating as the number one enemy. They rest on the underside of the leaves and when disturbed the young ones move quickly, often with a characteristic side motion which suggests skidding, in order to reach the other side of the upturned leaf. In their winged adult stage they will disperse from disturbed plants like a miniature cloud of dust if the infestation is severe. The sucking causes the leaves to curl and buckle, and they also become discolored.

Both the Dahlia leafhopper and thrips carry virus diseases and their prompt destruction all through the growing season offers the only effective means of keeping the plants free, or nearly so, from these damaging diseases.

There is no known cure for virus diseased plants. These are quickly recognized by the stunted, off-color appearance. They should be pulled out and destroyed.

Flowers should be cut preferably in early morning. Remove all foliage from the part of the stem which will be under water as it will turn black and start decay very quickly. Short-stemmed varieties will keep in good condition if sprinkled with water and kept between layers of wet cloth or paper; others should be plunged deeply in cold water. Flowers which fail to revive promptly can be restored by making a slanting cut of the stem under water.

No One Grows Them Any Finer

Wherever we have exhibited our flowers we have won a large share of the awards. This past summer at the New York Gladiolus Show we made 24 competitive entries for which we received 18 first, 3—second and 3 third prizes in addition to four section champions, grand champion and silver sweepstakes medal (illustrated). These flowers, selected from our regular field stock were in competition with stock especially grown for show purposes.

GROWING GLADIOLUS FOR CUT FLOWERS

Gladiolus are the country's leading outdoor commercial cut flower. Their successful culture in every section of the United States is proof of their ability to thrive under varying climactic and soil conditions. They will grow with excellent results in many different types of soil providing drainage is adequate. While they do not like to be submerged in water for any length of time, moisture is the largest single factor in the production of top grade spikes. In sections where the average monthly rainfall is below 4", artificial watering is essential. Full exposure to sunlight and free air circulation rank next in importance.

SOIL PREPARATION AND FERTILIZER

Before planting, the soil should be plowed or dug to a depth of 8". Fertilizer should be broadcast and then harrowed or raked into the soil. Where no specific fertilizer recommendation is available for a particular soil, use 1000 pounds of a standard 5-8-7 potato fertilizer per acre. Opinions differ on the use of fertilizer, with lighter soils usually being more in need of it than heavier ones. In heavy soil we have not been able to see any difference between light, heavy, and no applications.

Placing the fertilizer in the rows or in bands alongside the corms is fraught with danger because the bracing roots travel extensively in a nearly horizontal direction and just as soon as they encounter the fertilizer zone they are burned and the affected plants injured.

PLANTING AND CULTIVATION

Grade the bulbs according to size for bulbs of a similar size flower at a uniform time and this means a substantial saving in cutting and spraying costs.

A width of 3 feet between the rows is required where tractor cultivation is practiced, otherwise 2 feet will suffice. Make the rows perfectly straight. Open them deep enough to permit covering No. 1 or larger corms with 4 inches of fine soil. Depending on their size, smaller ones are covered 2 to 3 inches deep. This applies to average soils. Cover less in heavy soil; deeper in sandy one.

Space the corms evenly—allowing 10 to 15 to the yard, depending on size. (See illustration). Set them upright in a perfectly straight line to permit close cultivation. This reduces expensive hand weeding in the rows to a minimum.

To provide an extensive cutting season make successive plantings at weekly or ten-day intervals from the time the corms are safe from belated spring frosts until about 75 days before fall frost. Only No. 1 or larger corms should be chosen for the last plantings.

Start shallow cultivation as soon as the first shoots make the rows clearly visible and repeat as often as necessary to eliminate weeds and maintain a dust mulch. Clean land requires 4 to 5 cultivations during the growing season.

DISEASE AND INSECT PEST CONTROL

The most important factor is the planting of clean, healthy stock. All diseased bulbs should be discarded and extreme care should be taken to see that the remainder are free from thrips. This pest multiplies rapidly and a small original infestation can soon destroy an entire crop. Next in importance is the maintenance of clean planting and surroundings. Remember that left over bulbs or foliage from a previous season can contaminate the new plantings. Regular and frequent dusting or spraying is essential. Federal and State experimental stations are constantly working out new and better disease and pest control methods. We suggest that you apply to your County Agent or Farm Bureau for the latest information available.

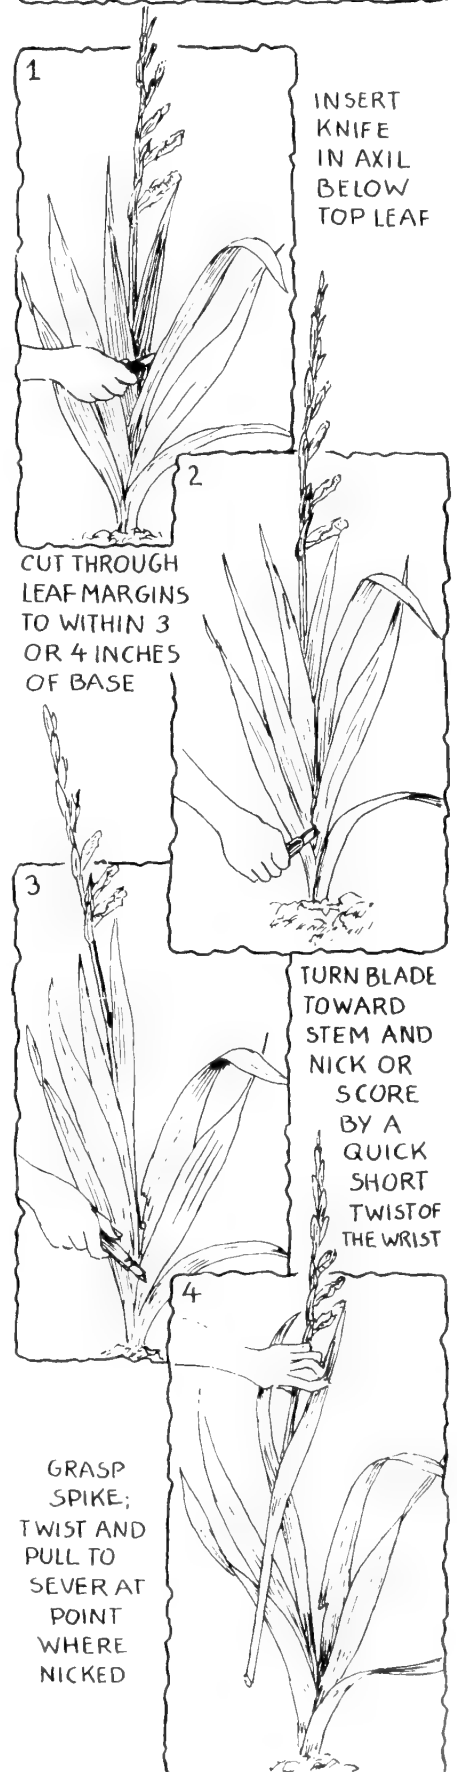

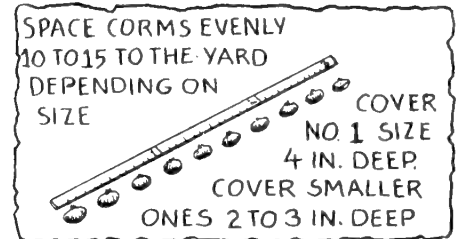

All unhealthy plants should be dug out as soon as discovered and any flower spikes that have finished blooming should be cut off and taken from the fields.

CUTTING FOR MARKET AND LOCAL USE

Cut the spikes when the lowest bud begins to show color. When wanted for local use the flowers will develop a deeper color if allowed to open on the plants, but this, of course, requires extra time and care to keep flowers from bruising.

Because the length of the spike has a decided bearing on the price realized, "hooking" them out is far superior to the old cutting method, especially since it preserves six of the seven leaves on a flowering-size corm. Take a sharp knife and run it, blade down, from the uppermost leaf along the stem and parallel with it to within 3 or 4 inches of the base—slicing through the leaf margins encountered. At the low point give the knife a quick short twist while pushing the blade forward, around and into the stem to give it a nick less than half-way around. Now grasp the spike with the other hand somewhat below the lowest bud, give it a slow but steady twist and the stem will part where nicked. (See illustration.)

Gladiolus flowers, when cut, open quickest if exposed to warm humid conditions with plenty of water to draw on. If it is desired to retard the opening of the blooms set them upright, without water, in a cool place. The tips of gladiolus spikes turn quickly toward the light and therefore should be kept upright at all times throughout the entire cutting and marketing procedure.

BEGONIA—Tuberous Rooted Double

BEGONIAS – Tuberous-rooted

No other bulbous subject has increased in popularity over the past few years so much as these Begonias. They make a very useful and beautiful pot plant for early spring but they serve their best purpose when grown outdoors—for here they provide a continuous feast of beauty until cut down by frost. We have reports from our Belgian growers that they have a good crop this season so we expect to deliver very nice bulbs.
